NEVER TURN AROUND IN THE STREET WITH A LADDER UPON YOUR SHOULDER.—
Old Mr. Watson, on Nelson street, has got a nice little bill to pay. He sent a man down town for a pot of paint and a ladder. The man got the paint, and then went to a lumberyard after a ladder. Then he tied the paint-pot on the end of the ladder, and put the ladder on his shoulder. This was a very smart arthe ladder, and put the ladder on his shoulder. This was a very smart arrangement, and the man himself admired it very much. He started for home this way, and didn't find any trouble in getting along the first block, because people had an impression that a long ladder with a pot of yellow paint dangling on the end of it wasn't exactly the thing to trifle with, so they balanced along on the embostone, or rubbed up against the buildings. Pretty soon the man saw somebody in a store he knew, and he turned around to speak to him, and drove one end of the ladder into a milinery case and knocked the crown out of turned around to speak to him, and drove one end of the ladder into a millirery case and knocked the crown out of an $18 bonnet. Then he backed off in afright, and knocked over two sewing machine agents with the other end. Then he started to turn around, and an old gentleman who was desperately endeavoring to pull his wife out of danger, saw the peril, and shouted out: "Hi, there!" But it was too late. The pot struck against an awning-post, tipped to one side, and the entire contents went over the aged couple. This so startled the man that he whirled desperately around, smashing in an entire store front, frightening a milkman's team, and knocking over some thirteen persons who were actively dedging about to get out of the way. Then he dropped the ladder, and fled into the country, shouting murder and fire at every jump. A regular ordained painter is now engaged on Mr. Watson's house.—Danbury News.

Chosses.-Crosses as religious symbols have been used from the remotest an-tiquity. They are to be seen in the rock-hewn caves and temples of Asia and rock-hewn caves and temples of Asia and of Central America: nay, in the very wilds of India, among groups of cairns, dolmen and cromlechs, where it is supposed they were erected by an aboriginal race, which had been driven there by the first Aryan invasion, several thousand years before Christ. The Egyptians had the cross as a symbol of immortality. They had a crucified God, too; crucified to the tree that represented his fructifying power. Osiris appears with a cross in his hand. So does Astarte, the Phonician goddess. So does Shingmoo, the Chinese madonna, who is frequently chinese madonna, who is frequently represented with an infant in her arm. In Buddhist mythology the cross occurs as an emblem. It is to be found on Etruscan and Pompeiian monuments, and on the most ancient Brittish, Gallic and Massilian edges. The Cetter recess and Massilian coins. The Celtic races had it. The Druids cut trees in cross-shape, even as the Hebrews seem to have shape, even as the Hebrews seem to have done. The cross, with a circle round or above it, seems to have been a favorite symbol of many nations. In Kamtschatka Humboldt found pre-Christian crosses. In the British Museum there are now some statues from an Island of the South Pacfic which have crosses of the simplest form (in the shape of a T) engraven on their backs.—North American Review.

OSE YET LEFT .- One of the sanitary police, in going through an alley yester-day, came along to a barn, and as he halted a voice said: "Take off that cost, haited a voice said: "Take off that coat, young man." There was a pause, and about the time the coat was off, the father continued: "You 've needed a tanning this long while, and I'm ready to give it to you; you 've been (whack) going out (whack) mights and (whack) and a how!) you've assead your (whack) ing out (whack) nights and (whack) and (a howl) you've sassed your (whack) mother, and you've sassed (whack) me, and you've been trying (whack jump and howl) to run the house; but (whack and yell) can't do it." There was more whacking and howling, but the officer didn't stop, being convinced that Detroit had at least one old pioneer left.—Free Press.

DENVER is anxious to march to the DENER is anxious to march to the rescue of the United States against the Modoes. Eighteen "citizen scouts" of that fast town have addressed a letter to General Sherman, offering to place sixty men under arms and guaranteeing to finish up any tribe against whom they may be sent, provided the government furnish each man horses, arms and rations. This proposition evidently means execution without speculation.

A MAN failed in Porthmouth, New Hampshire, some thirty years ago. He settled with his creditor for sixty cents on the dollar, and went off, an insovent emigrant, to the West. He was not magrant, to the West. He was not heard of again, and had been gone so long that his oldest creditor might not have known him. But on the 19th uit., there came a letter from him, bearing the money to pay the remainder of his indebtedness.

It is said that the wife of a prominent Western Senator is one of the best poker players in Washington. A certain member of a foreign Legation has spent seven thousand dollars at her residence trying to learn the game. The Indianapolis Sentinel remarks that "with such a wife as that, the Senator might have declined with scorn to participate in the salary steal; but he didn't."

Mrs. J. P. Leslie, of Elinwood, Ill., assaulted the Rev. Mr, Frazell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at that place, a few days ago, for asserting that the expensive coffin used to inclose the remains of her late husband, Mr. Leslie, was purchased with the tears and groans was purchased with the tears and groans of drunkards' families. The deceased was a whisky manufacturer.

A Kansas Cirri fellow climbed up on a ladder and peeped in at a window to see the fairies change costume. He got a bucket of soap-suds in the face, a heavy pammeling from the proprietor and actors, and now declares himself opposed to the theater on high moral grounds.

Dr. Loomis, the physicist, is worrying over his plan to utilize the electricity of the clouds for light and fuel, or, as the correspondent puts it, "To tap the great arial stratum and bring down enough of God's warm breath to heat and light our great cities."

A Bosrox woman, who has been reading in the papers that Sunday marriages are illegal, wants to know how it is with a baby born on a Sunday. If so, which should be punished, the father, the mother, or the baby?

Ir may be worth while for scoundrels to know in view of the coming postal cards, that a London man was recently sentenced to pay a heavy fine and go to prison for two pears, for libeling a young lady on one of those cards.
